

So that is the list.

You saw it the moment he drew it out — that strip of parchment he keeps at his side, names inked down one beneath another. "The Order forgets nothing," he said, almost laughing, holding it up like a man showing off his gold. He has no idea what he is showing you.

Those are the names of the Secret Council — every soul the Order has bought out of your own walls, set down and marked. That is what you should have come here for. Not words. That.

And now he has set it down — laid it on the ledge at his side and stepped off to walk his little circuit, pointing out his walls, gazing off to boast. He will not hand it over; but he does not truly guard it either. A man that proud never watches his own table. Each time his round carries him away and his back is to it, the parchment lies there with no eyes on it.

You could take it. Only while he is turned — never while he is looking, or he will have you by the wrist, and then you are thieves caught at the Order's own wall with no one to call. But on the turn, when he drifts off along his path...

Watch him. He walks it the same way each time. Wait for the turn. Lift it clean. Then walk — do not run, not until you must.

Carry those names away with you. Everything after tonight turns on them.

↪ GAME MASTER — Once the list is in your hands, bring it to the Game Master, who keeps to the Rynek Staromiejski (the Old Town market square). What comes next is waiting there.